

Travel to Trento

The easiest way to travel to Trento is to fly to Verona or Venice and then transfer to Trento by train, bus, or other private transportation services. Other major cities such as Milan and Munich have direct train connections to Trento as well.

Off the beaten path of mass tourism, Trento is a quaint city full of historic charm. With its unique architectural mix of Medieval and Renaissance buildings, it is a true hidden gem. Situated in a wide glacial valley with a backdrop of beautiful mountain peaks, Trento is influenced by Germanic architecture as it was part of Austria until 1919. Trento is famous for its Trentodoc, one of the most precious spumante sparkling wines in Italy.

Venice

Venice can be easily reached by train. The fastest trains from Trento to Venice take around 2 hours. The fastest trains from Verona to Venice take one hour. If planning to take trains while in Italy, we recommend buying tickets in advance as they become more expensive as the day of travel approaches. Official Ferrovie dello Stato web page.

Dolomites Alpine Region

The Dolomites are mountain range in the Italian Alps in northeastern Italy, stretching across the regions of Trentino-Alto Adige, Veneto, and Friuli Venezia Giulia. In 2009, these mountains were listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The scenery is dramatic, and visiting is recommended in the summer especially for hikers. We also recommend renting a car to visit the area. Distance from Trento is about one to two hours depending on the area you plan to visit.
